Background

■ Purpose

The central purpose of the assignment is to design, develop and implement a three-year strategic plan for the Community Development & Continuing Education Institute (CDCE-I) which is cost effective, user-friendly and functional, and which responds to the need for improved project-planning, implementation and management.

■ Key supporters and funders

The strategic planning task is part of a larger project titled, “Grass Roots Civic Action” that is financed by Catholic Relief Services (CRS) under the USAID-funded Community Participation Program (CPP)

■ Timeframe

The strategic planning process took place from April 5th until June 15th, 2014 as was determined in the contract signed between CDCE-I and the consultant.

■ Achievements to date

As part of the strategic planning process, the key tasks and outcomes achieved include:

- All relevant documents regarding CDCE-I and the CP program reviewed.
- Data collection tools designed, including tools for individual interviews and a SWOT analysis with staff members and board representatives.
- Environmental screening accomplished.
- Three-year strategic vision and strategic objectives developed and prioritized.
- Strategic issues identified and prioritized.
- A list of viable, effective and efficient strategies developed according to prioritized criteria.
- Strategic Plan developed and submitted on schedule.
- A one-year operational plan and accountability framework proposed.
- Fundraising strategy developed and proposed on schedule.

Executive Summary

CDCE-I was established in September 2010 to enhance the socioeconomic status of the West Bank through a variety of strategies including: capacity building and employability interventions with university students and graduates, awareness raising and advocacy interventions, and networking and partnership development with private, public and community-serving institutions. Since its establishment, significant activities have been conducted and impressive achievements have been attained. Thus, CDCE-I has taken the opportunity to conduct its first strategic plan, due to the fact that CDCE-I operations and services have started to expand to wider targets within the Bethlehem area and West Bank. Towards that end, CDCE-I was granted this opportunity as part of the project mentioned above, "Grass Roots Civic Action", funded by USAID through the CRS/CP program.

During April and May 2014, the core activities of the strategic planning process were held and over the second week of June 2014 the strategic plan, operational plan, fundraising strategy, accountability framework and advocacy plan were proposed for CDCE-I review. As part of the environmental analysis process, it was clear that CDCE-I succeeded in achieving remarkable targets at all levels and through all of its projects and activities. CDCE-I staff are found to be qualified to a great extent and sufficient to perform the tasks assigned to them, thus far. Despite the fact of its recent creation, CDCE-I has become an active player in the community development and continuing education arena, at Bethlehem governorate level. The expansion of its operations to Hebron, Nablus and Jenin prove a significant success, though it is early to judge the impact of this expansion on the institution's strategic vision.

The emergence of CDCE-I within the boundaries of Palestine Ahliya University College brought CDCE-I's identity to the forefront of all discussions. The university is a private for-profit entity while CDCE-I was established as a non-governmental and not-for-profit entity. Still, both institutions are organically connected. It was vital for the profit-making university to have CDCE-I as an arm of its services in order to reach community donors while serving targets beyond students and graduates. However, CDCE-I views this relationship as a serious challenge to its autonomous identity, especially as its offices are located on the university's campus.

The sustainability of CDCE-I was a key strategic issue as well. Currently CDCE-I is dependent on a limited number of donors such as USAID and GIZ. The fact that there is no secure core fund to date and because the vast majority of its staff is hired on a project-basis, has many ramifications. One major ramification is job insecurity and the expectation for high turn-over. This has a potentially serious impact on staff morale, staff commitment and continuous need to search for alternative employment as they see their employment at CDCE-I as "temporary".

Purpose, Objectives & Timeframe

Purpose:

The central purpose of the assignment is to design, develop and implement a three years strategic plan CDCE-I which is cost effective, user friendly and functional and which responds to the needs for improved Project component planning, implementation and management of the project.

Objectives:

- The specific objectives of this assignment include:
- Define mission, vision, values, objectives and strategy (SWOT analysis).
- Define unique selling proposition, strategic priorities and action plan.
- Develop more effective internal evaluation mechanism.
- Propose a financial reporting system.
- Develop a sustainable fundraising strategy.
- Develop an Advocacy plan.
- Propose a new organizational structure.

Timeframe:

The strategic planning process was conducted from April 05th until June 15th, 2014 as determined in the contracted signed between the CDCE and the consultant.

Methodology

The strategic planning process applied a variety of methodologies. Those are summarized in the following:

- Reviewing all relevant and available documents including those reflecting the CDCE-I development history, progress reports, budgets, description of its interventions and others. Also, a review of the strategic planning literature in similar fields was held. Through this review, a list of key factors and issues to
- Additionally, the most convenient strategic plan framework to CDCE-I as a young organization was adapted.
- Individual Interviews was the second method we applied by which 7 key informants (4 internal and 3 external) were interviewed. A semi-structured questionnaire was designed for these interviews in the light of findings from the documents review.
- Focus Groups were a third methodology we used with CDCE-I staff to analyze the internal environment and strategic issues identification and prioritization. Two-day workshops were held for these focus groups. A third focus group was implemented with the senior staff and board representatives to discuss and review the internal and external environment screening and identify the priorities for fundraising strategy. Two e-hours meetings held with this focus group.

Identity of CDCE-I

■ Mission

The mission of CDCE-I is “To contribute to the development of the local Palestinian community by enhancing the integration of youth into the labor market, working towards sustainable development, and promoting citizens’ active engagement in public discourse. CDCE-I aims to achieve these goals through the implementation of programs & projects in the areas of capacity building, awareness raising, and advocacy, based on CDCE-I’s belief in the value of citizens’ active participation in the development process, and their equal right to access and benefit from all social resources and opportunities.” This represents a rephrased and refocused mission statement reflecting the spirit of original statement CDCE-I developed in its establishment in 2010.

■ Vision

Since this is the first time that CDCE-I has worked on developing its strategic plan, and after the review of the proposed vision by its seniors as founded in the different documents, the following vision represents the voice and well of CDCE-I staff and board members as strategic planning was interactive and participatory-based:

“CDCE-I strives to play a key role in the areas of youth and community development in the West Bank in general, and Bethlehem governorate in particular, through well-planned interventions targeting youth empowerment and institutional and community development”.

■ Values

As CDCE-I staff and board have agreed, the following are the most important values that CDCE-I stands for:

- Equal opportunity and active participation of all partners in the development process.
- Transparency and Accountability
- Social Justice
- Integrity and Reciprocity

■ Operating Principles

Within CDCE-I, the following operating principles were identified by the staff and board:

- Professionalism
- Ownership and belonging
- Commitment and acknowledgment
- Mutual Respect and Reliability
- Information sharing and constructive feedback

■ Summary of Theory of Change

CDCE-I occupies a unique position between the Palestine Ahliya University College, as a service provider, and the local community, where development needs are rapidly increasing and changing due to continuously deteriorating socioeconomic and political conditions. Since its establishment, the innovative approach that CDCE-I adopted was driven by the vision of empowering youth and enhancing their capacities to allow them to have a greater and more active role in the sustainable development of their community. Therefore, youth are at the core of CDCE-I's interests and interventions, and university students and graduates in the West Bank in general, and PAUC in particular, as well as secondary students, are direct beneficiaries of many CDCE-I interventions. What's more, youth are both a target and a change agent. Some of them receive the CDCE-I services and an opportunity to fulfill their individual need, while others get it as an opportunity to play an active role in serving their local community.

On the other hand, other groups, other than youth, may benefit from interventions in which professional and community volunteers are involved. Towards that end, CDCE-I designs and delivers a package of interventions (programs and projects) in different areas including, but not limited to, capacity building in professional and technical fields, awareness raising on human rights and social justice, business and microeconomic development, good governance, and social and policy advocacy (according to CDCE-I reports).

Furthermore, CDCE-I believes that strategic partnerships and networking with other civil society organizations, public service providers, local government units, private sector groups, and Arab and international donors is key to implementing effective and efficient interventions on the local and national scale. CDCE-I feels strongly that no single actor can bring about a sustainable change in a complex set of socioeconomic and development issues given an environment of increased demand, competition and continuously diminishing resources.

Strategic Planning Process

■ How and Who?

The strategic planning process passed through a series of planned steps. Since it was a participatory process, various individuals were engaged at each level. The first step in the process was the preparation and launch, during which several tasks were performed including: a) the establishment of the strategic planning team, in which three CDCE-I core staff members (including the executive director) were engaged, b) the orientation of CDCE-I staff on the strategic planning process, c) the development of a list of key staff for individual interviews, and d) developing the list of key documents for review.

The second step was reviewing all relevant documents and designing the data collection tools which reflect all relevant data. The third step involved environmental scanning during which in-depth individual interviews were conducted with 8 persons, five of them internal CDCE-I staff and three external staff (See Annex 6). Part of the environmental screening was the SWOT and PEST analyses, implemented during a 2-day workshop (11 contact hours). The CDCE-I staff collected data for PEST session five days prior to the first day of the workshop, during which they were expected to meet other well-prepared CDCE-I staff and volunteers and ask them questions about the political, economic, social and technological trends in the external environment that are currently influencing the operations of CDCE-I, or would influence its future plans and interventions., The environmental screening process also incorporated the views of the CDCE-I board and senior staff through SWOT and PEST analyses.

The fourth step was focused on reviewing the current mission statement, and developing the strategic vision and objectives for the next 3 years. The strategic issues (obstacles, concerns, and challenges, etc.) were identified and a list of mitigation strategies were developed and prioritized as part of the fourth step. The fifth step involved the development of the operational plan for the first year. The first draft of the strategic plan and operational plan were then presented to CDCE-I staff and board to add the final touches before finalization.

■ Analysis of Internal Environment:

The main findings classified under strengths and weaknesses are the following:

6.2.1 Strengths:

- The vision of CDCE-I that combines the community development dimension with that of continuing education constitutes a competitive advantage compared with other continuing education centers in the West Bank in general, and Bethlehem in particular.
- Full authorization of CDCE-I Board of Directors to the executive team to plan, prioritize, and perform
- The successful expansion to Hebron, Nablus and Jenin (out Bethlehem governorate) constitutes the first step towards wider coverage in the West Bank.
- High job satisfaction and morale among CDCE-I staff reflects its participatory management and leadership.
- Open door policy for volunteers, though no policies or strategies have been developed in this area given the fact CDCE is still a rather young institution.
- The professional and technical capacities of staff are sufficient to perform the duties and functions that current programs demand.
- Strong and effective partnerships at the local and national levels.
- Sufficient and enabling technological infrastructure that CDCE needs to keep active internal and external professional cooperation and work relationships functional
- Satisfactory attention and efforts made by CDCE-I management to enhance and promote the technical and professional capacities of its staff and volunteers.
- Satisfactory segregation of roles within CDCE-I projects.
- Information sharing, feedback and transparent communications despite the fact that there is a need for more systematization in this arena.
- Being located within PAUC provides CDCE-I with a package of strengths including open access to students, a major target group in CDCE-I programming, access to a pool of professional and academic resources within the university, and access to many other facilities and resources like computer

- labs, halls and open spaces where CDCE-I can implement different various activities and programs.
- Having reliable and advanced financial and administration systems in place.
- The fact that CDCE-I is still a young institution provides it with a wider margin of strategic options and flexibility.
- The expertise accumulated by CDCE-I in the development of strategies that work towards bridging the gap between a university education and labor market demands, an area of great interest for unemployed graduates.

6.2.2 Weaknesses:

- Confused identity given the fact that CDCE-I is located within the university and the community still perceives it as such and not an independent civil society organization.
- Unsystematic coordination and flow of info between programs and their staff
- The lack of a clear and official system to manage and organize volunteerism.
- Absence of systematic marketing policy and strategy locally, nationally and internationally.
- Unsystematic monitoring and evaluation policies and systems within CDCE-I.
- The fact that CDCE-I operations is greatly dependent on project grants creates a high level of turnover and deep sense of job insecurity.
- Administrative policies still lack important sections such as progressive incentive and benefits packages.
- A poorly updated website - especially the platforms, fields and icons.
- There is clear absence of continuing education programming and courses that may generate revenues for CDCE-I.
- Poor utilization of qualified human resources and integrating them into CDCE-I programs and services.
- Confused identity with the Palestine Ahliya University College due to the shared location of the two.
- The technical and professional capacities of the team are not on the advanced level needed in order to improve the quality of services that CDCE-I provides and enhance its competitiveness.

- The fact that CDCE-I is very young limits its capacity to compete with others who are more experienced in the field.
- The IT capacities of CDCE-I staff are considered weak.
- CDCE-I's performance in the field of advocacy and networking is limited.
- The limited amount of partnerships with the private sector for economic development purposes.
- Unsystematic methods of internal monitoring on the staff's performance.
- Weak capacity in operational planning.
- There is a potential conflict in the vision and management of CDCE-I as an independent society and the formal continuing education unit it represents for PAUC.
- The roles and responsibilities of staff are confused to some extent and need clarification.
- Fundraising activities are limited to two staff members with no support of the board

■ Analysis of External Environment

6.3.1 Opportunities:

- CDCE-I is highly valued by Palestine Ahliya University College as a fundraising platform since the university is a private-for-profit entity, and therefore cannot reach out to donor-funding in this capacity. CDCE-I is the platform for community development and continuing education for the university.
- There is an increased interest by donors on CDCE-I's work with and for youth in general, and university students / graduates in particular.
- There is a huge demand on work with and for local communities on specific social and economic development levels.
- The successes that CDCE-I has accomplished so far, particularly in the field of career guidance, entrepreneurship and capacity building, enable it to establish a wider range of partnerships and implement interventions with wider targets and with local, national and international actors, including donors.
- The technological revolution would enhance the internal and external communications and would enable effective marketing and collaboration opportunities.
- There is an opportunity for CDCE-I to reach out and recruit international volunteers who might strengthen its capacities to sustain itself and improve operations and programming.

- The potential opportunity for CDCE-I to design and develop specialized courses, that other continuing education centers are not offering, by utilizing the unique professional capacities available at the Palestinian Ahliya University College. This may increase its revenue-generating capabilities that would enhance the Society's sustainability.
- Based on the success that CDCE-I has achieved in Hebron, Nablus and Jenin, there is a potential for wider coverage and deeper expansion into the West Bank.
- The need to apply more systematic efforts to establish partnerships with Palestinian private sector would enhance the Society's sustainability and decrease its reliability on external donors.

6.3.2 Threats:

- The surrounding political and socioeconomic instability exposes CDCE-I to great risk at funding levels and especially with the limited number of donors that CDCE-I is currently dependent on.
- The increasing number of competitors competing for the limited or diminishing funding opportunities in the areas of development in general, and youth development in particular.
- The fact that there are very limited income-generating activities weakens the Society's ability to sustain itself.
- The community still confuses the identity of CDCE-I with that of the university, a private for-profit entity.

Strategic Priorities

■ Strategic Objectives

Given the agreed upon mission and strategic vision mentioned earlier, CDCE-I prioritized the following strategic objectives that should be accomplished over the next 3 years (2014/2015 – 2017/2018):

7.1.1 Institutional Development:

To enhance the institutional capacities of CDCE-I to effectively and efficiently design and deliver what contributes to the accomplishment of its vision and what would promote its sustainability;

Outcome KPI:

CDCE-I is sufficiently capable of designing and delivering interventions that are directly serving its vision and sustainability

7.1.2 Programme Development:

To review and enhance the quality of its ongoing interventions and introduce new ones that are responsive and relevant to the needs and demands of the Society's various targets and partners.

Outcome KPI:

The various beneficiaries of all CDCE-I interventions are satisfied with the positive changes brought to their well-being.

7.1.3 Advocacy:

To promote the CDCE-I status and the strategic issues it is supporting through a variety of interventions

Outcome KPIs:

The new strategic framework and key development issues it is designed to address were sufficiently communicated and shared with all beneficiaries and partners

7.1.4 Fundraising:

To develop and implement a fundraising strategy that would contribute to the Society's sustainability through a systematic review of CDCE-I's current funding sources and plans to reach out additional potential sources, and to develop a plan to enhance internal revenues in the future.

Outcome KPI:

% of needed resources for CDCE-I to deliver its planned interventions secured and provided efficiently.

■ Strategic Issues:

The team identified a list of strategic issues that should be addressed in order to accomplish the strategic objectives identified in section 5.1. Issues are (without prioritization):

- Limited outreach and memberships to awareness building and advocacy networks at the local and national levels.
- Limited partnerships with local NGOs and CBOs.
- The dependency on a narrow base of donors and lacking a clear fundraising strategy.
- Absence of programming targeting the public's awareness of human rights.
- Limited number of programs directed to raise capacities of youth.
- Absence of internal communication policy and system.
- Limited technical and professional capacities of the CDCE-I team, and the lack of specialized experts.
- Weak PR function and absence of marketing strategy.
- The lack of specialized professional diploma programs.
- Values of transparency, accountability and equity need to be promoted within CDCE-I

■ Strategies and Priorities

CDCE-I team suggested a list of strategies to address the strategic issues identified in section 7.2. Those strategies and their priorities as perceived by CDCE-I team are as follows:

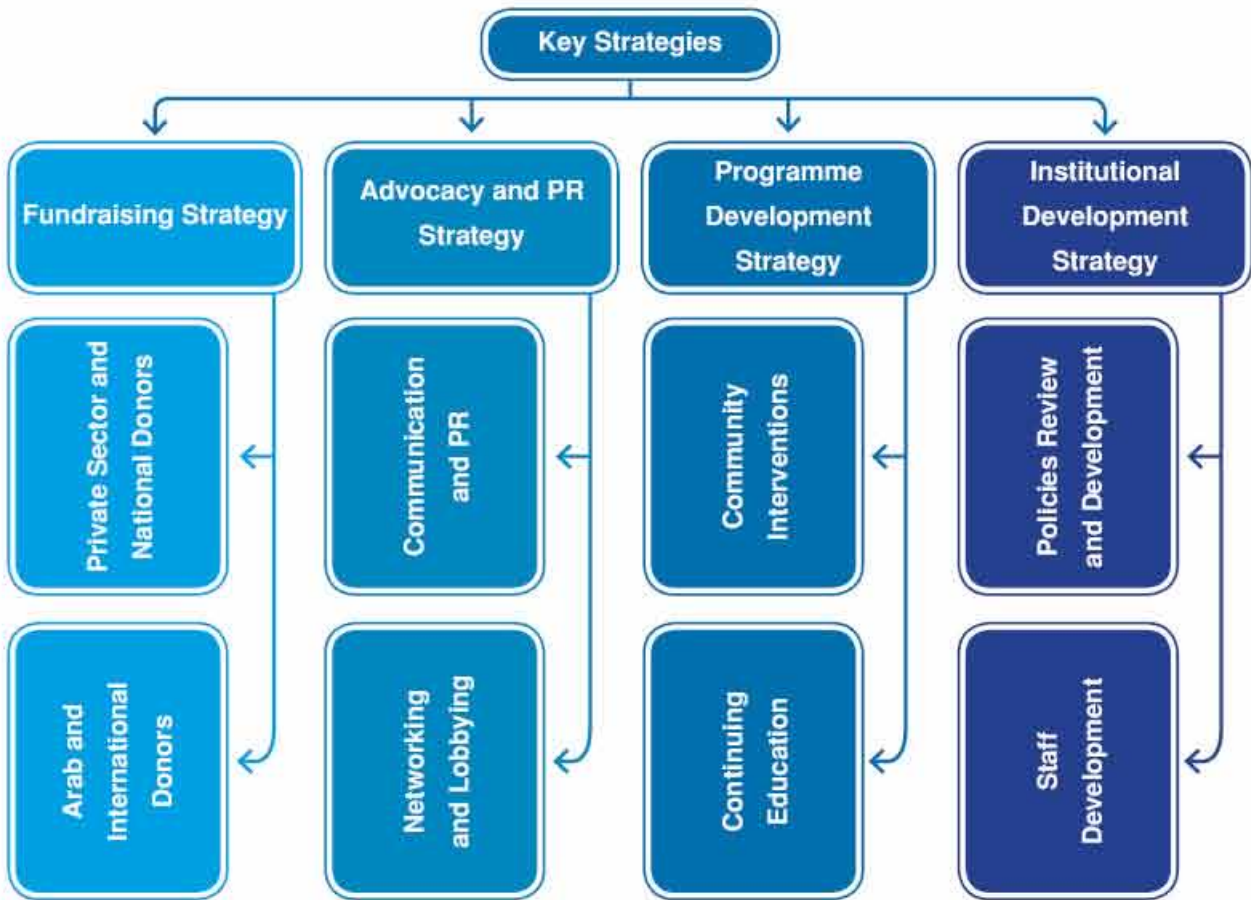

Strategy	%	Priority
Review of existing partnerships and envisioning new ones to enhance the CDCE-I capacities to accomplish its strategic vision and objectives	92%	1
Developing the team's technical and professional capacities and recruiting more specialized experts	92%	1
Improving CDCE-I public relations and marketing capacities	88%	2
Designing and delivering professional diplomas	88%	2
Designing and delivering more programs aiming to raise the capacities of youth	88%	2
Diversifying CDCE-I's pool of donors	88%	2
Reaching out to and becoming members of national advocacy networks	83%	3
Developing internal communication policy and system	75%	4
Developing and delivering programs to raise the public awareness of human rights	71%	5
Developing and delivering programs to raise the public awareness of human rights	71%	5

The above listed and prioritized strategies are classified under four major strategies illustrated in diagram 7.3.1 and reflected in section 7.1 as areas where the strategic objectives are focused:

1. Institutional Development Strategies: that is comprised of two sub-strategies; Policy Development and Staff Development.
2. Programme Development Strategies that is comprised of Community Intervention and Continuing Education strategies
3. Advocacy Strategies which is comprised of two sub-strategies; Communication and PR, and Networking and Lobbying
4. Fundraising Strategies that comprised of the strategy of Private Sector and National Donors targeting, and the strategy of targeting the Arab and International Donors.

Diagram 7.3.1
CDCE-I Key Strategies

Implications for the Current Programs

In the light of the above inputs made by all selected stakeholders for this strategic plan, there are some key implications for the current programs and priorities for CDCE-I to consider. Some of those reflections will be at the following elements and levels:

- The current organizational structure, lines of authorities and responsibilities
- The jobs descriptions
- The communication system
- The designs of current programs
- The relationship with PAUC
- The degree of BODs involvements
- More professional staff on board
- More intensive capacity building initiatives
- More focused and intensive PR and fundraising activities

Operational Plan (One Year)

■ Operational Objectives:

The operational objectives that should be accomplished by the end of the first year (2015) are:

- 11.1.1 The CDCE-I organizational and M&E structure, communication policies and HR manual are reviewed and developed through resources and capacities available within the PAUC and / or outsourcing mechanisms.
- 11.1.2 All areas of confused functions and overlap between CDCE-I and PAUC, as well as areas for cooperation are negotiated and clarified.
- 11.1.3 All ongoing programs / projects are streamlined with this operational plan, given the possible modifications to the organizational structure and staffing, and 3-4 new interventions are introduced.
- 11.1.4 An advocacy plan for CDCE-I developed and implemented.
- 11.1.5 A fundraising strategy and sustainability enhancement plan developed and implemented

11.2 Implementation Timeframe:

This plan will be implemented over 12 months starting January 1st, 2015 and ending by December 31st, 2015.

Targets:

The targets of this plan and its various interventions are the following:

- CDCE-I staff, board and the relative management and staff at Palestine Ahliya University College.
- Youth groups, including universities graduates, who are targeted by the ongoing programs / projects in Bethlehem, Hebron, Nablus and Jenin Governorates.
- All other groups who are targeted by the ongoing programs / projects in Bethlehem, Hebron, Nablus and Jenin Governorates
- Youth groups, including university graduates, who will be targeted by the new programs / projects in Bethlehem, Nablus, Jenin, Tulkarim, Qalqelia, Salfit, Tubas, Jericho and Hebron Governorates
- All other groups who will be targeted by the new programs / projects in Bethlehem, Nablus, Jenin, Tulkarim, Qalqelia, Salfit, Tubas, Jericho and Hebron Governorates.
- Current and future donors who would be interested in the institution at the local, national, regional and international levels.

Advocacy Strategy

1.0 Purpose & Objectives:

1.1 Purpose:

The main purpose for the CDCE-I advocacy strategy is to enhance its status at the local and national levels in order to strengthen the basis for its sustainability on the long-run.

1.2 Objectives:

This strategy aims at accomplishing the following objectives:

- Introduce all local, national international stakeholders to the CDCE-I identity and strategic plan
- Establish a network of unilateral and multilateral partnerships at the local, national and international levels

2.0 Targets:

The targets of the advocacy strategy are:

- PAU Staff
- PAU Students
- LGUs at Bethlehem area

- CBOs at Bethlehem area
- PNGOs - West Bank
- Palestinian Advocacy Networks representing interest groups
- Arab Donors present in Palestine
- International Donors present in Palestine

3.0 Timeframe:

January - June 2015

4.0 Strategies:

The following is unrestricted list of strategies for advocacy work to achieve the objectives identified in section 1.2:

	Strategy Title	Definition
1	Online Dissemination Strategy (ODS)	A well designed format and content about CDCE-I produced in a soft copy format to be disseminated to a prepared list of targets via the CDCE-I website and via emails
2	SMS Dissemination Strategy (SMSDS)	A short informative message to be disseminated to mobiles of staff working with national and international entities that can be selected from Jawwal and Watanyeh telecommunication companies
3	Town Hall Meetings (THM)	This a public gathering that can be organized for different types of audiences, mainly CBOs and public institutions that are serving citizens in rural areas, refugees camps and cities. Key informants and activists from local communities are also part of the audiences targeted by this strategy
4	National Advocacy Networks (NAN)	This is about becoming a member of all networks in Palestine to which CDCE-I is eligible to become a member. Presenting CDCE-I relevant info to the members of these networks and using their online portals is part of this strategy
5	Special Receptions Strategy (SRS)	Organizing a formal gathering for specific targets where CDCE-I can present its plans and areas for cooperation and needs for funding. Arab and international donors and charities can be the perfect target for this strategy
6	Bilateral Venues Strategy (BVS)	This is about organizing a well-structured presentation and brainstorming to individual targets who might be interested in hearing about what CDCE-I stands for and its future plans. Each presentation can be customized to the based on the audience focus.
7	Strategic Plan Launching Week (SPLW)	Organizing a launching week at CDCE-I office and that can be for different target every over a week such as one day for students, one day for CBOs of Bethlehem, another day for diplomatic missions ... etc. A schedule can be prepared and distributed on sufficient time before hands to give interested targets plan their time to attend.

Work Plan

This strategy can be implemented over the following stages:

Stage	Title	January	February	March	April	May	June
I	Preparation
